“ It's been a little over a month since I last touched you, held you and called your name. It still doesn't seem real that you are no longer with me in the physical. What I do hold on to is that your beautiful spirit is still very much alive in my heart and I carry our memories in my mind every day.

*Love you always,
Mommy*

No More Pawprints in the Snow

*The day I met you, you were as white new snow I had no idea the happiness you would bring me, did you know?
Little in stature but big in your heart
We formed an unbreakable bond right from the very start You were my keeper and I was yours; 15 sweet years I just wanted more Oh how I miss you, your sassiness, your bark, your cute puppy face, your smell and oh, that beautiful tail As I watched you grow from puppy to my Bling-girll you would run through the house and chase for your treats like chasing a mouse On that final February day you seem to know there would be no more pawprints in the snow Now as I look around each room or to stand at the door I still look for you even more Realizing in the end that your pawprints are now forever in my heart
I know we will never be apart
We completed our journey together your life has come to an end
If only I could get one more day to spend I loved you for a lifetime; cried while I carried you for the last time all with a breaking heart yet I knew we still shared that same unbreakable bond that had brought us together right from the start You have now crossed over that beautiful Rainbow Bridge to a place of awe
I felt it, I knew it the night I felt your paws Rest easy my girl ...*
