Linda lit a candle

I am so sorry for your loss. One thing that has helped me with grieving my Kaylee, was to remember all of the good times we had together. Remember that HerShe is no longer in any pain or sickness. You gave her the best life she could have ever imagined and know that she will be anxiously waiting your arrival at Heaven's gate. She has been reunited with your loved ones and they are taking care of her in your absence, until you meet again across the rainbow bridge.

Chris,

Although I never had the pleasure of meeting HerShe- I know she was as loved as my Sandy was & still is. HerShe will be waiting for you when you cross over Rainbow bridge to meet up again.

It hurts to much when our babies are gone, but the good thing is that she's free and happy now and no pain.. And watching over you and will be waiting on the other side of the rainbow... She knew you loved her with all your heart... And she loved you too
