Martha Carrozza

“ My beloved companion of 17 1/2 years passed away and I just want to take a few minutes here to share a few memories and to celebrate her life. Lucy was, to misquote Shakespeare, small but with a fiercely spirited personality. Sassy to the end, she never hesitated to tell you what was on her mind or voice her opinion. I will always remember our frequent walks around the West Village—she literally strutted through the neighborhood, greeting everyone and lapping up the attention. She loved popping into some of the shops—she especially liked Marc Jacobs and Casa Magazines—to say “hi” to her many fans. (She also knew who had the best treats!). She was always well-behaved, but never more so than during our often time-consuming Halloween photo shoot, which many of my friends looked forward to seeing each year. Playing dress-up didn’t come naturally to Lucy, but she indulged me and was super patient the whole time. Of course, treats helped. Once the costume finally came off, she usually got her very favorite treat of all: vanilla ice cream. If I even uttered the words “ice cream” in her presence, she’d squeal with unabashed excitement and twirl in happy circles. Whenever I was out in my neighborhood without her, people would ask me where she was and how she was doing. Lucy possessed the kind of adorable charm that left a lasting impression. She was funny and smart and sweet and just very, very special. I miss her madly and always will—my little Lucy Goose❤️
