“ Love you, big guy. I'll burn your image on the tallest peak of the east coast. You're a big floofy legend and deserve nothing less.

“ My big Steve. From day one you were faced with so many obstacles and you overcame them all. Your life was an inspiration. Despite having CH and being abandoned as a kitten, you survived outside long enough to find a family that loved you and care for you. It took some time, but you became so social and lovable, you were like having a tiny dog.

I remember when you ran away for a month. I was so sick and heartbroken every day. We even put out a reward for your safe return. It seemed like an eternity. Right when I thought you were gone forever, mom found you, clinging to life outside the house. Your fighting spirit couldn't be stopped.

Your back legs, as weak and little as they were, carried you further than anyone thought possible. 14 years of Steve, who would have thought?

Steve, you used every one of your nine lives, and in doing so your innocent face touched so many of my friends over the years. You have no idea the dozens of admirers you had online. Everyday someone would ask me how you were doing.

You fought until the end. You'd have a bad day and we'd think, this is it, but you'd always bounced back. You earned the nickname Lazarus cat.

All things in the world end. Time will take even the most mighty among us. You rest well now my old friend. You're in heaven with Teej. Until we all meet again.

“ Steve was a sensation. He was loved by all his many friends and fans from around the world.

He was an incredible cat and quite the character who lived a long life and leaves a legacy that will truly never be forgotten.

We can rest assured Steve is fine. We all know he's in heaven and watching over everything as he did in life.

Rest well, Steve. You were loved by more people than you could ever know.
